In-The-Moment Conversations™

Program Overview

Friction is natural and necessary for growth, but what does it take to transform friction that shows up as either false harmony or destructive conflict into productive conflict? In this course you will learn how dynamic friction begins with In-The-Moment Conversations™ to head off destructive conflict.

Leaders whose temperament is to avoid conflict need a psychologically safe environment to speak up, be vulnerable, and stay focused on the higher purpose of the organization. Leaders whose temperament is to seek conflict are trained to listen with empathy, make it safe to be vulnerable, and learn from mistakes.

“Practice In-The-Moment™ Conversations for productive conflict resolution before they become crucial conversations with disengaged employees and underperforming teams.”

— Mike Ellis, V.P. of Regional Managers, HKP
